COMPLETELY GLUELESS!

Glueless laminate flooring has made installation a snap. Requiring about half the time of a glued installation, the planks of a glueless system lock together with a snapping or clicking mechanism. Planks are placed over the existing floor at a 45-degree angle and held against already laid planks. Then, pressure is applied and the planks snap together. Like regular laminate flooring, a glueless floor "floats" above the existing floor. A glueless floor can be installed over most hard surfaces, including plywood, concrete, vinyl flooring, and hardwood. To resist moisture, many glueless floors have wax-impregnated edges, resins, and moisture-resistant underlayments. Laminate floors, in general, are known for their durability and versatility, as well as their ability to resist scuffs, dents, and stains.
